Career: Law

The Future Latino Leaders Summer Law Institute (formerly the Future Latino Leaders Law Camp) is a nine-day, residential program held by the Hispanic National Bar Foundation in Washington, DC for Latino students to learn more about the legal profession. Established in 2005, the Law Camp offers students the chance to meet influential Latino leaders in the nation's capital. Students visit various government buildings and offices and meet with lawyers, judges, and officials of the United States government. Students also have the opportunity to attend sessions on the legal profession and participate in a Mock Trial Competition. This is a fantastic opportunity for Latino high school students who are interested in law to travel to Washington and connect with their peers from across the country as well as meet other successful Latinos.
